The good Christians who work to save their soul are always happy and content; they enjoy a foretaste of the blessedness of heaven, and they shall be blessed for all eternity. On the contrary, the bad Christians who lose their soul are always complaining; they murmur, they are sad and miserable as stones, and they shall thus be for all eternity. See what a difference! ... No one is as miserable as the bad Christians who abandon prayer and the sacraments, and languish in sin. We dismiss our conversion until death: but who can assure us that we would have the time and the strength in that dreadful hour? No, really, if the sinners reflected on eternity, on this dreadful always..., they would convert at once. Cain has been in hell for about six thousand years, and he just entered. – The saint Cure of Ars.
